compositions by
jazz legend

John
Coltrane

"... At the same time,
this very unease reveals
something in us.
Something that feels the
lack, aches for meaning,
and recognizes the truth,
like a tuning fork vibrating
for its single,
unmistakable note."

Sam Dillon (tenor sax)
Andrea Domenici (piano)
Billy Drummond (drums)
Fabrizio Sciacca (bass)

NEW YORK
ENCOUNTER

Coltrane was one of those geniuses who by taking seriously this unease dedicated his life to the pursue of that unmistakable note, that ultimate promise of happiness and fulfillment. For Coltrane, there was "never any end" in this quest for beauty and truth. He was consumed by this unstoppable search for the embrace of the Infinite, that Love Supreme of his most famous suite. Because of the radical earnestness he had his desire of fulfillment, fifty years after his death, Coltrane remains a true companion for all those who are seeking meaning in life. As reminded us by Ken Burns in one of his extraordinary documentaries, Coltrane is one of geniuses humanity should always be grateful to have met and thankful for the pain they endured in their quest for Truth and Love.
